Requesting Permission to Conduct Research

Undergraduate students at the University of Guyana taking the course ENG1203- Technical Communication are required to complete investigative reports or feasibility studies in partial fulfilment of the course assessment. These projects require students to gather data to investigate a problem within the community (academic, organisational, social, commercial and other environments), analyse the data collected and find suitable solutions for problems they have identified.

In order to fulfil this requirement, students may use various ethical instruments and methods of data collection such as questionnaires, interviews, discussions and other appropriate research strategies.

The International Centre of Excellence for Modern & Indigenous Languages, Literature & Linguistics (ICEMILLL) is requesting your permission for students to conduct their investigation within your organisation/institution. Please see a list of the students who will require your permission attached to this letter. Your consent and cooperation will be greatly appreciated and contribute to students' success in the course ENG1203- Technical Communication.
